. Ione, February 5th.—Pursuant to notice, the fruit-growers of Amador county met here in convention yesterday, for the purpose of adopting measures by which a successful war might be waged against the codling moth and other insects damaging to fruit. A number of evidences of the frightful ravages of these insects were produced, in the shape of decayed branches and roots of the trees. It was acknowledged by all present that these pests had made terrible inroads on the fruit trees of this county, and by a unanimous vote resolved to commence a war of extermination upon them. As this was the first convention of the kind in the county, a great interest was

Homicide in a saloen.

PORTLAND, February 5th .- At half-past 11 PORTLAND, February 5th.—At hair past 11 to-night August Angus, an Austrian, entered Schneider's saloon, First street, near Yamhill, and began a quarrel with Bartholomew Garbarino, an Italian, who was playing pool. Angus knocked Garbarino down, when the proprietor of the saloon interfered to separate the men. Angus then drew a revolver, and emptied five chambers, three balls hitting Garbarino. One wound, in the head, is thought to be fatal. The men were strangers to each other, and no motive for the murderous assault can be imagined.

James McClatchy called to order and formally welcomed the guests again. Mr. Mills, of the RECORD-UNION, then arose and said he had been honored with the privilege of proposing the first and principal toast of the evening. He gave "The Occasion we Celebrate—the Quarter Centennial Anniversary of the Sacramento Bee."
He called upon "its veteran editor,"
James McClatchy, to respond. Mr. McClatchy arose amidst warm applause. He said that some of the invited guests were unable to be present, a number had sent letters of regret, and these he requested Mr. Sheehan to read before he himself responded to the toast. The letters were accordingly read. Among these was a letter from Loring Merchandise Report.—The following whose health Mr. Mills proposed, profreight passed Ogden for Sacramento on nouncing him the Nestor of the Press the 31st: For Locke & Lavenson, 12 cases hardware; C. IN THE CHURCHES.

Services were held in the churches yesterday as usual. In the First Baptist Church the hand of fellowship was extended to converts. In Calvary Baptist Church the sacrament of baptism was observed. In St. Paul's Episcopal Church Rev. Carroll M. Davis preached at 11 A. M. from Matthew xx., 6: 'Why stand ye here all the day idle?" He said that no sentence could better express in so few words the coming season of penitence all the different periods, the Jews only were called until the eleventh hour, when the Gentiles and heathen also were called to equal privileges—called within the pale of a church, which, made for mankind, recognized no eternal distinctions, knowing men neither as Jew or Greek, barbarian or Scythian, bond or free. Another interpretation, more instructive perhaps, would refer these hours to the different periods of our earthly life-child-hood, youth, manhood and old age-to show that the call is made again and again. He asked, shall we interpret the penny as temporal reward? Notice, it is paid at the end of the day. Temporal blessings always accompany; eternal reward follows. It seen far better to interpret the penny as eternal salvation. Nor need this make it a mere matter of wages. The gift of eternal life is a gift of grace, not of merit, and in point of fact that is the chief lesson of this parable.

away sorrowful—the price was too high, because he acted from a regard to self and not to God, and sought eternal life on the score of his own merits and not on the ground of mercy. And the question of St. Peter, immediately following, shows a no more worthy spirit. We can, he said, have no claim upon the kingdom of God. We cannot hope to be gers, including twent spirit. We can, he said, have no claim upon the kingdom of God. We cannot hope to be worthy of it, and yet we may expect to reach it, if we will but be diligent in our calling. The primary application calling. The primary application was undoubtedly to the Apostles, then to the Jews nationally, and individually it is to all who hear the gospel. And the comparison should be made not only as regards time, but also opportunities, talents or other advantages We have here the truth that many (not all) first shall be last, and many (not ali) last, first. There is much encouragement to those who are called late, but a solemn warning to those who are called early.

And to-day, said the speaker, the question comes home to us, "Why stand ye here all the day idle?" Can we who have been baptize! into the Church of Christ, who have read the Bible from childhood, who have heard it preached from Sunday to Sunday, can we say, "No man bath hired us?" Truly not! All our lives have we heard it, but have we heeded it? If you are not in the vineyard, for what are you waiting? The eleventh hour? It is not impossi One day is to God as a thousand years and—salvation being of mercy, not of merit—one last dying, believing look turned on the cross can save a soul on the very brink, ere it passes over; even as in the camp of Israel "it came to pass that if a serpent had bitten any man, when he beheld the serpent of brass he lived." But what assurance have you that when the eleventh have that when the eleventh hour comes you will be ready to enter the vineyard? When eleventh hour will be we know not. Work while yet there is light; "the night cometh, when no man can work." Those who were called at the eleventh hour heard the call for the first time; they did not reject it. Finally, the speaker asked, Shall we murmur if some brother, who has not toiled quite as hard, has gained the prize? Nay, we ought rather to be thankful, knowing that though we bear the heat and burden of the day we shall be more than amply rewarded. Do you think there is no work which you can do? Look around you; see on all sides the lack of fidelity and interest in the Lord's work. Behold the poor and sick and needy uncared for and unattended. Look into the heart; are all its ways lovely ; is there nothing you would change? Ah, there is work enough, and more. "The harvest is great, but the laborers are few," and the Master is ever calling. The Jeannette Survivors. WASHINGTON, February 4th -Nearly 100 WASHINGTON, February 4th — Nearly 100 naval officers made application by letter or by telegraph, or by help of influential friends, to the Secretary of the Navy to be ordered to go on the search for De Long and the missing boats of the Jeannette. Many applicants are officers on active duty or on leave, and their general zeal to go to the rescue of the Jeannette's survivors is highly creditable to the patch from James Gordon Bennett: Paris, February 4th.—Permit me to suggest that a reference to the request of Lieutenant Danenowr to go back and continue the search, that, in howr to go back and continue the search, that, in view of his condition, he should be ordered home. If he returns to the north there is strong probability of his losing his eyesight entirely; but on his way home he could have the best medical attention and regain the use of both his eyes; nor does it seem to me necessary to send line officers from America. It would only put the Government to unnecessary expense, as I have already sent a man, who is now on his way to Irkutak; and Sebirakoff having kindly placed his steamer, the Lena, at my disposal, the search for De Long and Chipp can, with the assistance of the Russian authorities and inatives, be continued with all possible energy and efficiency at the earliest practicable moment. If Danenhowr and the invelids under his charge are ordered home, I will see that they have all possible dered home, I will see that they have all possible care and the best medical advice on the way. I make this suggestion entirely without Darenhow's knowledge. JAMES GORDON BENNEIT.

THE SECRETARY'S REPLY. The Secretary of the Navy has cabled Bennett in reply, that he has sent orders for the return home of Lieutenant Danenhower, in accordance with Bennett's suggestion, and that he has already ordered two officers to Europe to take part in the search for Captain De Long and Chipp, and he thinks this necessary in case of any accident to Engineer Melville, and as a matter of duty from the navy to the officers and men in distress.

WASHINGTON, February 4th .- It is said by ecretary Kirkwood's friends that he abso-ntely has no knowledge as to the President's ntentions regarding the appointment of his successor. One of the Iowa Senators said he did not believe that Kirkwood was to be su-perseded at all. He has no assurance that that opinion, for reasons that he did not care to mention. On the other hand, the Pacific slope Senators are as confident as ever that Sargent will get the place, although Booth has friends who have suggested him. Detroit, February 4th.—Senator Christiancy publishes in the Free Press the following comments concerning the promiscuous publication of dispatches passing between Secretaries of States and Ministers to foreign countries: "The discreet Secretary of State, when any part of the dispatch is called for publication, is always supposed to exercise some discretion in withholding from publication such dispatches, or parts of them. the publication of which might be detrimental to the public interest. A Minister to a for-Secretary of State and the President might like to know, which they might think useful to them, as bearing upon the foreign policy of the country, and which may be of such a nature that to have them made public would yed from such information. rived from such information." Mr. Christiancy says he takes no part in the controversies between the President and Blaine. He blames Blaine for allowing the letter to go on file where it might be published. In any event, he would not permit himself to suspect that Frelinghuysen, if knowing the nature of the letter, would ever have pubshed it. It is said Green would have made $25,000 or $30,000 out of his scheme had it not been detected. His plan was simply to make an overcharge on each bill.
